

Phantom: The Immortal

Sexual desire and soul-searing need fuel this contemporary erotic sequel that relocates the original character from Gaston Leroux's classic novel The Phantom of the Opera to present-day Paris. While attending an auction of music memorabilia, young soprano Christine Delacroix bids on some letters written by another young soprano, Christine Daae, who lived during the 19th century. Here she meets the handsome Comte Rezso Esterhazy, who immediately sets out to court her. Despite his attentions, Christine becomes obsessed with the Daae letters and her namesake's mysterious Angel of Musica masked man who lived beneath the Paris Opera House. Seemingly immortal and frozen in time, the Phantom is condemned to life below the opera house and in the shadows until Christine Delacroix auditions for a minor role in Faust. Convinced the Christine from his past has been returned to him, he sets out for her to have the lead female role. He visits her in her dressing room to give her singing lessons, all the while remaining hidden from view. Insanely jealous over Christine's budding romance with the Comte, the Phantom abducts her and takes her to his underground lair, where the singing lessons continue. Only this time they are far more depraved and sexual in nature. A debut writing collaboration from bestselling authors Mitzi Szereto and Ashley Lister!

Sobre el primero de ellos, un libro, titulado: Los esenios, Qumrán, Juan Bautista y Jesús de Hartmut Stegemann (1), me aclaró bastante el personaje, pero me quedan varias dudas sobre el mismo. Cuando éstos pertenecían a la nobleza, era aún mayor el empeño por conservar esa condición de nobles hidalgos, y acreditarla debidamente mediante documentos, que la justificaran, para así transmitirlo a sus descendientes.
